The recommended browser for www.bibleexams.com is FireFox. Our developers use FireFox when building the software that powers the bibleexams.com exam engine.

Internet Explorer has known issues in handling AJAX and other web 2.0 processes, particularly `getElementbyID`, the caching of the HTTP Request function (real time updating) and the XMLHttpRequest (the core of the AJAX architecture.)

Another known issue with Internet Explorer has to do with the lack of support for older versions of IE and developing technologies.

FireFox is FREE to use and can be downloaded from www.getfirefox.com

Assessment for the Church \(more \)
The Bible Content Exams for the Church have been designed to help church leadership assess the level of general knowledge of the church membership. These exams have been used to identify the strengths of those teaching Sunday School, leading Small Groups, or other significant leadership areas. Some pastors use exam results to identify areas of potential future messages to train up their members in areas where general bible knowledge may be lacking.

Assessment for Colleges \(more \)
The Bible Content Exams for Colleges have been designed to help colleges measure the overall level of general biblical training that is accomplished over a set period of study. Entrance exams are used to measure the level of general bible knowledge of entering freshmen, while exit exams are used to measure the level of general bible knowledge of graduating students.

Assessment for Missions Organizations/Para Church \(more \)
The Bible Content Exams for Missions Organizations have been designed to help the organization identify areas of individual strengths in their general bible knowledge.

The Personal Challenge \(more \)
The Bible Content Exams for Personal Edification have been designed to allow the individual to assess themselves and their own level of general bible knowledge. Results will help identify areas of weakness allowing the individual to target future self - study.
